

The one call close

This is a complete no-BS sales process.

To close the conversation with people, you need to understand why you are asking what you are asking.

There are things you need to know about them in order to sell. That doesn't mean you have to ask these exact questions.

(The Opening)

1 - Why are they here?

2 - What do they want help with?

3 - Why do they want help with this?

4 - Set the frame (small agenda)

- What they don't have is what they need. That way you know where to lead the conversation. More money, more freedom, or more time (biz op).
- Everyone has some level of pain or lack, otherwise they wouldn't be on the call with you.
- Keep it at the convo level. Focus on them ASAP. Be and sound genuinely interested.
- When setting the frame, you don't want to sound like you have an agenda. If you are going to have one, have a very small agenda.
- "This is to see where you are, where you want to be, and then at the end if you feel that this maybe is what you're looking for then we can move on to the next step. Would that help?"

Why they want help explains their problem, but the way they describe it explains what need they lack. Always one of these...

The further down, the more pain. Ask questions about their needs, and start from the bottom up.

- contribution
- Growth

- Variety
- Significance
- Love and connection
- Certainty

Early push-backs

- *"Just say what you're doing"

(they think they're ready to go all in right away. They're not)

Soft:

"Ahh sure, we'll get through it

What we're doing is very custom, so to speak... so it has a lot to do with what you need help with...

Just so I can get a better idea, what is it that you need help with, specifically?"

Medium:

"Absolutely, but here's my thinking. If you're happily married, you don't usually go on dates, right?

So what would make you do something like that in the first place?

So why did you choose to jump on a call even if things are good?"

or

"I understand, we'll go through it. But the thing is, we don't really have a one-size-fits-all solution for everyone, so if you want, we could spend like 3-4 hours going through all the different solutions.

But I don't really have that time and maybe you don't either.

Do you think it would be better if I found out a little more about you so I know exactly what would help you?"

or

"Absolutely, I understand. We'll go through it. But it's going to be pretty hard if I don't even know exactly what you need.

You know, it's a little stiff if you go to a doctor and ask for pills without explaining what your problem is in the first place...

so honestly, what makes you want to do something different in the first place?"

- "Everything is good. Just want to get better"

(future-focused individuals who don't like to admit problems)

Put them in a Good-to-great frame

"Ahh okay so it sounds like we want to go from Good to Excellent or even Best?"

Add hook

"I love working with (people/avatars) who want to go from good to best, because they know they can't do what the 99% do. Do you get what I mean?"

Rephrase the question

"So what would you say you need to go from good to excellent/best?"

"So what do you feel you're missing right now that would make you good instead of excellent?"

(Situation)

1 - What are they doing right now?

2 - How long have they been doing it?

3 - Why are they doing it?

Optional:

What results are they getting? (biz op)

(Problem)

1 - What is missing / why is their current situation not sufficient?

2 - Probe and make it hurt

3 - Eliminate all potential other solutions

4 - Get them to commit

- You need pain because pain creates urgency. The pain is in the symptoms.
- The difference: The problem is that the person is broke. The symptom (what carries the pain) is that they are stuck on public transport, can't afford to pay the rent, never go on trips, etc.

- To reach these symptoms, you ask questions about their needs, how it makes them feel, etc.
- Remember to start by asking questions about 'lower' needs.

Create pain in two different offers

- Improvement Offer

(They are already trying but it is not working)

How:

You MUST create doubt in their current method and make them admit that it is their fault.

Ask internal based questions.

"So what do you feel you are missing that is causing you to be stuck at your current weight?"

Pro tip: About biz op → Reveal exact numbers quickly, you can't hide behind numbers

- New Opportunity Offer

(you are selling them on a completely new mechanism)

How:

Get them to admit that their current opportunity is causing them pain.

"What would you say is the thing that your current business model is not fulfilling that is causing you to be stuck where you are now?"

- Early pain push-back

"Everything is good, just want more"

How:

Get them to briefly go into their goal and then pull them back into reality quickly.

"Okay, but a lot of people are still happy staying in the same situation they are in... where does your drive to earn more come from? Why is it important to you?"

"Okay, but why can't you do all that right now? What do you feel is missing, in terms of your business, for you to be able to do those things right now instead?"

When you have the problem, you start digging with probing questions...

Play confused, worried

- Start broad - "What do you mean by..."
- Get specific - "Can you give an example?"
- Explore time span - "How long has this been going on?"
- Quantify the pain (optional) - "How much money/time do you feel you are losing right now?"
- Case impact - "What impact is this having on your business/day/people around you?"
- Personal impact - "I don't want to assume anything, but how do you feel about this? / How does this make you feel?"
- Consequence (optional) - "What happens if this continues?"

Eliminate potential solutions

"Unlike ABC, what makes you want to seek help instead of... doing it yourself / continuing with one of your other solutions?"

Get them to sell themselves on your opp.

Understanding purchase decisions

1 - What have they done to solve the problem so far?

2 - Pre-handle objections

3 - Identity reframe

Future pacing

0 - Reframe

1 - What does it do for them to reach their goal?

2 - Get a moment

- Reframe
- Use "medal reframe"

"Say you tell someone to run a 100-meter dash, they will run. But say you then have them run the same dash, but this time they actually get a medal if they run a certain time, will they run faster? Yes."

"So say [opportunity] is your race, what would you say is your medal? What does this mean to you?"

- This defuses and introduces your deeper questions
- or
- Personal event (advanced and you actually need a fitting story)
- Ask a genuinely curious question:

"If you had the opportunity to do [goal], what difference would it make in your life?"

- Probe
- "*Why that?"

"What would you drive?"

"Why that car?"

"What would it mean to you personally?"

- Then paint a picture

"So if you really imagine it [paint a picture based on what they said] - how does that make you feel?"

"So if you really imagine it - Driving your new white Ferrari Pista from the dealership, and it's 100% yours, completely paid-off, you're cruising down the coastal roads of Miami, palm trees all over, the sun is shining, you're completely free - right then, how does that make you feel?"

- You can paint anything. Conversations, deals, flashbacks, moving into a new house, etc.

Consequences

0 - Reframe

1 - Identify the consequence of not taking action

2 - Get them to commit to change

- First a reframe to get them to open up

"I appreciate you being open with me, and now we know what you're running towards. But if you take the same person who runs the 100-meter dash and put a lion behind them, do you think they'll run faster then too?"

"So to you, what is your lion? Why?"

- The cost of not taking action is the biggest motivator for people to buy. Create pain and don't look for answers, look for emotions.

"Can I just ask, if nothing changes on [topic], how likely is it that you'll reach [goal] in [time frame]? Why not?"

"So what if nothing changes? # to 6 months go by and we're stuck with the same [problem] and we never get [emotional outcome]?"

Potential push-backs

- "I wouldn't let that happen, I want to do this"

Throw their ego aside:

"I'm not questioning your will, but if we never let the lion out of the cage, we'll never run..."

Reframe the question.

- "I don't really know"

Always answer:

"If you really think it through?"

- "I would do something else"

Reframe: Having a plan B is part of the problem.

"But don't you think that might be part of the problem?"

If you look at everyone who is really, really successful in life, they always had a plan B?

Do you know where the expression "Burning the boats" comes from?

When the Spanish came to South America and were going to take on the indigenous people who lived there, they were outnumbered 1:10.

So the Spanish leaders burned all the boats of the army, because he knew that the soldiers would give up more easily if they knew that they had a plan B - to escape from there.

So my question is... are you willing to burn the boats in your life to achieve this goal?"

"To really be able to do this, we have to understand what the lion in your life is right now..."

Rephrase the question.

- Then you have to get them to say for themselves that they don't accept this

"So you're going to let it happen?"

"But whose responsibility would you say it is? To let it happen or not?"

"So are you ready to actually make a change so this doesn't happen?"

"Why now? Why not push it forward for a while like most people do?"

"So it's time to make a change then"

- NOW you can move on to the presentation, but they have to agree to it.

"Great! That's what I needed to hear from you... Since you said you have X problem that causes Y things... then what we do will work for you."

"So if it would help you... I can go through how we help people with X problem get to Z goal. Would that help?"

Presentation

1 - Pillar 1

2 - Pillar 2

3 - Pillar 3

4 - Find certainty

5 - Price

- Must be short and straight to the point, present your offer in 3 parts.

- Max 3-10 min

"One of the most common reasons people come to us is that they don't know [important knowledge]

Which leads to many feeling [strong emotion]

So the way we solve it is to [own solution]

And what this means for you is that you will learn [solution/method] because you said [the problems they mentioned]

So this is how we will solve it... 3 pillars

How does that sound to you? Why?"

- Now you need to make sure they are confident that this will solve their problem

"Before we dive into the investment, do you feel that what we went through can take you from [current position] to [goal]?"

"On a scale of 1-10, how much do you believe in this solution?"

"Why is that? What would it take to take it from [number] to a ten?"

- If they are convinced, you can drop the price.
- Don't make it a big deal, but it's important to value-bomb the sentence before mentioning the investment.
- First, tie the investment to an outcome, then explain the next steps.

"The investment to get you started so you can [achieve your goal - outcome based] is [price]..."

the next steps are simple, we'll start your onboarding right away so you can [learn the method] and [get closer to your goal - progress based].

Any questions on how it works? Would it work for you?"

Objections

1 - What do they mean?

2 - Why would they do it?

3 - Reframe

4 - Leverage

5 - Are they ready to change the situation?

6 - What can they do? What resources?

- Objections are limitations. Don't allow their limitations, you are here to help them.
- Right now their obj. weighs more is their "why"
- The goal now is to flip this so that their "why" weighs more than obj.
- "I don't have the money..."

Defuse + clarify.

"Okay, no problem. What do you mean you don't have the money?"

"Money aside, would you do it?"

"Why though?"

"But why invest to reach your goal?"

Reframe (Money hard → Commitment hard)

"Can I suggest something?"

"What's riskier?"

That you keep doing what you're doing now and things get even worse... or that we remove this constraint, get the money, and make sure you [get results]?"

"Why is it riskier?"

Leverage

"So what happens if you decide to stay where you are now?..."

"What are the daily things you'll have to carry a year from now, if you don't change anything?"

Commit

"Good thing you're open, it's actually taking the step that's the hard part. So are you ready to do what needs to be done? Why?"

Find resources

"Good, if you're actually ready, I want to see you win, how about we focus on what we CAN do instead of what we CAN'T do? So what can we do?"

- "I don't have time"

Defuse + clarify.

"Okay, no problem. What do you mean by that?"

Reframe (I can't → Others in my situation have done it)

"Can I suggest something?"

"There are those who have [their situation but worse], and still succeed, what do you think they do to actually create time in their daily lives for their priorities?"

Leverage

"So what happens if you decide to stay where you are now?..."

"What are the daily things you will have to carry for a year from now, if you don't change anything?"

Commit

"Good that you are open, it is actually taking the step that is the hard part. So are you ready to do what needs to be done? Why?"

Find resources

"Good, if you are actually ready, I want to see you win, how about we focus on what we CAN do instead of what we CAN'T do? So what can we do?"

- Smoke screen

Anything external or internet related is about time, money or perceived value.

Try to dig out if it is money or time that is actually the problem.

Most often it is money.

"What do you mean by that?"

"And where do you think this comes from?"

- Value objection

If you followed the process you should not get any value objections - it means they are not completely sure about the process/method.

Go back to the 1-10 scale.

Fear

- If they still don't want to pay - comes from a place of fear
- Go as far as you need to to get them to commit.
- Reframe
- Leverage
- Commitment
- Nice vs. Nice?

"Do you know the difference between being mean and nice?"

"Think about it... we're out at a bar or something, we're talking to some girls and my breath stinks..."

If you were nice you wouldn't say anything, because you'd worry about what I'd think or say...

But if you were nice, you'd say "bro, come here I have to say something, your breath is awful right now, have a piece of gum and we'll go back" because you want the best for me.

Is it okay if I'm a little "nice" to you now?"

- Go all in... tell them what they need to hear.
